Course description: The workshop will focus on developing a strong Continuum of Care for addressing issues related to Problem Gambling. Creating an effective Continuum of Care begins by examining the resources and services currently available. We will look at the work done by The Evergreen Council on Problem Gambling to address Prevention, Awareness, Education, Treatment and Aftercare. We will also look at areas where there are limits and gaps in services within our state and region. In addition, emerging services and support communities will be discussed (Recovery Café Model, Recovery Coach Academy, Peer to Peer Coaches, etc.). There will be time for discussion about the Continuum of Care in Arizona and areas where there is a need for more services with the State.

The afternoon session will focus on individualized care for Problem Gamblers, from initial treatment planning to aftercare and relapse prevention. Worksheets and other effective tools for working with Problem Gamblers and their families will be featured as well.

James D. Leingang has worked as an addiction counselor since 2007. He was instrumental in developing a Treatment Program with Providence St. Peter Chemical Dependency Center and began seeing patients in 2013.

James began working for the Evergreen Council on Problem Gambling in September of 2016 as the Community Engagement and Advocacy Specialist. Among his duties for ECPG, he works with therapists in Washington State to achieve and maintain their certification credentials to provide services for Disordered Gambling. He is also focused on developing a standard Continuum of Care and Basic Curriculum for treating Disordered Gambling. He also works to provide education and outreach throughout Washington State and the Northwest region.
